The Inter-Regional Society of Jungian Analysts includes members with a wide variety of training experiences and knowledge. As a result we are a theoretically pluralistic society whose members are actively involved in the ongoing dialog about the common ground of depth psychology. While our core area of focus is reflected in the Collected Works of C.G. Jung, training candidates in the I-RJSA are expected to have a basic knowledge of the differences and similarities between Analytical Psychology and Freudian Psychology as well as an exposure to the diverse contemporary analytic theories, e.g. post-Freudian and post-Jungian thought, Object Relations, Self Psychology, and Kleinian analysis.

Candidates are also encouraged to have some familiarity with some of the emerging areas of interest in depth psychology, such as attachment theory, infant observation research, developments in the neuro-cognitive sciences, and Jungian psychological political theory. Some of these trends are included in the works below:
