HIPAA requires providers using Skype to have BAAs

By Nicole Freeman 2/7/14

As expanding technology gives doctors new ways to contact patients and share their information HIPAA compliance questions continually pop up. Do the products being used protect patient data? Are additional safeguards required to comply with HIPAA? Is the product even meant to be used for healthcare purposes? In Oklahoma, Dr. Thomas Trow found out the hard way that Skype is not acceptable for use in telemedicine, contrary to his own beliefs. According to a report from NewsOK.com, Trow was using Skype to treat mental health patients he hadn't met in person after his own health began to decline. While the idea of telemedicine appealed to him, his choice of provider did not appeal to the Oklahoma Health Care Authority, who placed Trow on two years of probation and ordered him to complete a prescribing practices course in September. Three of Trow's patients died while under his care, although their deaths were not related to Trow's practices. On January 16, the Oklahoma medical board ruled that all telemedicine technology must comply with HIPAA. Skype, however, does not appear to be HIPAA-compliant. Skype's privacy policy does not mention business associate agreements (BAAs), which are required by the HIPAA Omnibus rule, and Microsoft Corporation, which owns Skype, makes no mention of the product under its updated BAA announcement. The Omnibus rule requires all healthcare providers and their associates to have BAAs in place. Without a BAA, Skype is not compliant. Providers must also receive patient consent before having any video appointments. While telemedicine can be a great alternative to traditional follow-up care appointments or for use in rural settings, providers must ensure that the products they use are compliant. Products intended for physician use, like CloudVisit Telemedicine and TeleMed Psychiatry, will often have additional features for billing and scheduling, as well as data encryption.

Journal of Analytical Psychology 60th Anniversary Event

'Reflections on Jungian Clinical Practice: From Then till Now'
(1955-2015)

13, 14, 15 March 2015
Arundel House, London

www.japjungianconferences.com

This conference highlights the Journal's abiding hallmark – its clinical orientation. Each speaker will draw on a specific paper, originally published in the Journal, which still informs their current thinking and practice.

Don Kalsched – the most widely read and regarded of contemporary clinical Jungian authors – pays tribute to Michael Fordham's 'Defences of the Self', perhaps the most influential of Journal papers. Murray Stein speaks from a Rosemary Gordon paper. Warren Colman, considers the future direction of analytical psychology.

We also have plenary contributions from Jan Wiener, Angela Connolly, Elizabeth Urban and Brian Feldman, in addition to the usual conference workshops, which include a critical discussion of the Editors' role from Andrew Samuels.

For full details (including abstracts of the papers they will speak from) are available on our website:

Call for Papers

38th ANNUAL IPA CONVENTION

New York University, New York
June 3-5, 2015

The International Psychohistorical Association is currently accepting papers for its 2015 annual conference to be held June 3-5 at New York University's Kimmel Center for University Life.

For 38 years IPA has brought together scholars from diverse backgrounds for 3 days of stimulating psychohistorical discourse. Year after year the cross-fertilization has provided vital insights into historical motivations-the "whys"of social movements past and present.

Interested scholars are invited to submit their proposed presentation title and brief abstract for possible inclusion in the IPA 2015 program. Papers are expected to be psychohistorical in focus, utilizing primarily but not exclusively psychological/psychoanalytic principles in examining historical motivation among individuals and/or groups.

Typical presentations are 40 minutes in length which includes 10 minutes for discussion.

Please send inquiries and paper proposals to Gilda Graff, IPA Vice President, at gildagraff@optonline.net.

Regional Conference of the IASD in New York City
April 25, 2015

CONFERENCE DESCRIPTION

Freud gave us dream work to untangle the threads of the latent dream, while Jung gave us active imagination to reenter the manifest dream and play with the imagery. Winnicott discovered the magical transitional space of children's play, where objects appear as in a dream. Play is children's work, and dreams require both. Dreams are grownup play. They can be creative and humorous or they can be serious, with life and death at stake. This conference has all the aspects of dream work and play.

Book Suggestions

1. For those of you like historical fiction, Ken Follet's The Century Trilogy; Edge of Eternity is the most current. You have to read them in order; it is a fabulous story following three families beginning in the time of WW I.
2. The Street Sweeper by Elliot Perlman is an amazing novel; a little strange in the beginning, but a story that brings together all the subjects we touched upon in Birmingham: race, WWII, the Nazis, mortality, life, - great read!
3. Defending Jacob by William Landay; a psychology mystery - tough but a good book.
4. My Promised Land: The triumph and Tragedy of Israel by Ari Shavit; a challenging, easy-to-read book for anyone interested in the back story of Israel.
5. The Devil in the White City by Erik Larson; great to read if you are going to Chicago.
6. Cathedral of the Sea by Ildefonso Falcone; another historical fiction.

32nd International Workshop on Analytical Psychology in Childhood and Adolescence

Belgium 5/28-31/2015

The theme of our Workshop this year will be "How do we work when the child or the adolescent refuses or stops the analysis?" This question addresses the themes of transfer and counter-transfer (including the side transfers in relation to the family and the professionals involved). It questions also our position as analysts, and the themes of the frame (how to keep it, how to work with the other professionals and with the family), of the beginning and the ending of the analysis, and of our ethics. As usual, the Workshop is limited to 40 participants, either members or analysts in advanced training in their Societies, both child analysts and/or adult analysts. The participants are gathered in +- 10 person bilingual groups, to discuss one case study per day, presented by one of the participants. Clinical lectures should focus on a few key sessions, drawings, or dreams; it is not possible to present an entire therapy. A workshop presentation is valuable insofar as it offers the participants an opportunity to ask questions, engage in discussions, and suggest different interpretations and theorizations based on the material. Persons still in training are welcome to participate, provided that an active member of their Society introduces him/her (please send a written introduction). The first-time attendees will not present a case study. The participants are asked to take part in the entire workshop. One-day participants will not be accepted. We will be housed at "De Kluizerij" (www.dekluizerij.be) an ancient monastery located at Affligem, in Flanders, in between Brussels and Ghent. It is a green and quiet location. The building is surrounded by woods, meadows and a vineyard, and has been converted into a seminar location.

We will be organizing an outing to Brussels on Friday at the end of the afternoon and evening. On Saturday afternoon, we will discover Ghent, an old Flemish city crossed by canals. We are excited about this for coming get-together which, we hope, will be rich in friendship, creativity, and intellectual stimulation, like the 31 previous ones.

Yours sincerely,

Presidents Corner

Dear IRSJA Colleagues,

I want to let those of you who don't know, I am in the process of re-locating somewhere in this beautiful area of northern California. Unfortunately my cell phone is not reliable here and my land line in Maine is off. The very best way to reach me is always via email. At the moment, the most reliable of my email addresses are the google accounts: patberry31@gmail.com or patberry23@gmail.com. The address you see below my signature is the post office I shall continue frequenting until end of May.

I send you all my very best wishes from this staggeringly beautiful country, every bit of it. My gosh, it's big. See you at the IRSJA meeting in April in Albuquerque (then also in Chicago in October).

Warm Regards,
Pat

ISTJ: Lord help me to relax about insignificant details beginning tomorrow at 11:41.23 am EST.

ISTP: God help me to consider people's feelings, even if most of them ARE hypersensitive.

ESTP: God help me to take responsibility for my own actions, even though they're usually NOT my fault.

ESTJ: God, help me to not try to RUN everything. But, if YOU need some help, just ask.

ISFJ: Lord, help me to be more laid back and help me to do it EXACTLY right.

ISFP: Lord, help me to stand up for my rights (if you don't mind my asking).

ESFP: God help me to take things more seriously, especially parties and dancing.

ESFJ: God give me patience, and I mean right NOW.

INFJ: Lord help me not be a perfectionist. (Did I spell that correctly?)

INFP: God, help me to finish everything I start.

ENFP: God, help me to keep my mind on one thing...*Look a bird...*ing at a time.

ENFJ: God help me to do only what I can and trust you for the rest. Do you mind putting that in writing?

INTJ: Lord keep me open to others' ideas, WRONG though they may be.

INTP: Lord help me be less independent, but let me do it my way.

ENTP: Lord help me follow established procedures today. On second thought, I'll settle for a few minutes.

ENTJ: Lord, help me slow down and not rush through what I do.

Amen.

Violence and Virginia Woolf Grappling with the Root Causes of War

Is Virginia Woolf's statement that "thinking is my fighting" an aphorism that we can usefully claim for ourselves today? Her essay "Three Guineas" has been read as her attempt to grapple with the root causes of violence and war, and she articulates several conceptions of peace throughout her literary output. Peace Studies, an interdisciplinary academic discipline and area of scholarly research that first became formalized as part of college curricula in 1948, debates theories of peace, including those put forth in Woolf's work. This lecture explores the ways in which Woolf's responses to violence and war contributed to the formulation of definitions of "positive" peace and helped establish an intellectual climate in which the discipline of Peace Studies and peace research have prospered. The lecture is followed by discussion and a social gathering.

Letters to the non-Editor

Dear IRSJA Community,

Thank-you for reaching out to me in such a supportive and heartfelt way. It means a lot to me to be part of our community.

As many of you know I was in a pretty serious car accident on November 7th on the I70 - driving to the retreat in Utah with the Andean medicine people that I had been working on for the last year. When we came to the final stop the back of the semi-truck was about 18 inches from our windshield. Luckily, no one else was hurt. I am currently mending a cracked sternum, broken ankle, and a mild concussion with facial wounds.

Although moving (extremely) slowly I am recuperating well. I was able to be present on a limited basis for the retreat and was wonderful receiving healings from the paqos. Whether it was an initiation or an unfortunate accident (or both) at this point - I am not sure. I do know that I am grateful to be alive and am looking forward to winter as a time for peaceful reflection.

With Love,
