Birmingham Party Invitation

We, Jan Clanton Collins, Nancy Qualls, Jutta von Buchholtz, and Lucie Magnus, are thrilled the IRSJA is coming to our hometown for the meeting in October and want to welcome the Society with a bit of down home Southern Hospitality. We are planning a light cocktail supper with cash bar (wine and beer) on Thursday evening (October 16) at Nancy's home. So be thinking about arranging your schedules to make room for some down time with colleagues when you are here in Birmingham.

Sacred Incan Ceremonial Immersion Retreat in Capitol Reef, Utah

Andean Altomesayoc Adolfo Tito Condori with Rodolfo Tito Condori and Jungian Analyst Deborah Bryon, Ph.D.

Part I and Part II four-day immersion retreats into the practice of traditional Incan ritual and ceremony in the ancient energetic power sites of the Anasazi. $600 each.

(These classes are designed for advanced students as well as beginners. Part I should be taken before Part II)

Part I: Overview of Andean Cosmology and Ceremony

(November 8th – November 11th, 2014)

In the powerful land of the Anasazi, during this spiritual intensive we will access sacred space and experience paradigm shifts through Andean ritual and ceremonial initiation and enter into deeper states of awareness and healing. As a powerful Altomesayoc, who works directly with the Apus and energy (kausay), Adolfo will give “hands on” instruction for growing and strengthening a relationship with the mesa (individual energy medicine bundle). (Room and Board not included – about $100 a day for food and hotel – less if camping.)

Part 2: Living in Ayni: Being in Right Relationship

(November 12th – November 16th, 2014)

According to paqos, an energetic relationship exists among all living things in nature, extending beyond the individual psyche, into the realm of spirit. Adolfo will assist us in deepening our connection with the natural world in order to live in ayni (right relationship) with the spirit of the land. Through working with the mesa, we will learn the secrets, myths, and knowledge of the ancient Incan healers and visionaries from master ceremonialist Adolfo who carries the direct Incan lineage.

(Room and Board not included – about $100 a day for food and hotel – less for camping.)

“Psychoanalysis is often about turning our ghosts into ancestors, even for patients who have not lost loved ones to death. We are often haunted by important relationships from the past that influence us unconsciously in the present. As we work them through, they go from haunting us to becoming simply part of our history.”

Having Fun in Birmingham!

Birmingham Bound! As a way of enticing you to Birmingham, I want to continue what I started in Denver when I spoke a bit about what awaits you here in the Deep South. Along with the Civil Rights District and Art Museum which are within walking distance from the Sheraton, I now want to lure you with the anticipation of the gastronomic delights that await you.

Frank Stitt is a world famous chef from right up the road in Cullman, Alabama. His restaurants have put Birmingham on the culinary map and I can personally recommend all four of them. They are a short trolley or cab ride away from the hotel in the Five Points South area. The flagship is Highlands Bar and Grill (reservations necessary) and following in no particular order are Chez Fon Fon (doesn't take reservations), Bottega Restaurant (reservations necessary) and Bottega Cafe (doesn't take reservations). Look them up on the internet and drool.

Also in the same location (Five Points South) are The Veranda (New Orleans cuisine), Hot and Hot Fish Club (Outstanding), Jim and Nick's Barbecue (not to be missed if you want real Southern BBQ or meat and three), and Surin West (Thai food).

There are also wonderful lunch places downtown and a few white cloth restaurants that stay open at night. There is a lovely restaurant in the Art Museum as well. The area around the hotel has restaurants, and they are also the kind that can be found in any convention area.

The latest issue of National Geographic Traveler has a wonderful article on Birmingham. It mentions Nikki's West, an iconic "Meat and Three" restaurant. Another of this ilk is the Irondale Cafe, made famous by the movie Fried Green Tomatoes. Both of these are a cab ride away.

More to come next month!
