Mirrors of the Mind 12:
The Psychotherapist as Artist

Return to Joy

A VIRTUAL ART EXHIBITION FOR MENTAL HEALTH PROFESSIONALS & STUDENTS

Throughout history, the arts have had a unique and powerful role in social change by bringing attention to human suffering and instilling hope. We believe in the liberating power of the arts to promote empathy, catalyze social healing, and promote greater interconnectedness.

VIRTUAL OPENING: November 12, 2023 6 - 8 PM PDT

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION: Monday, October 2, 2023

SUBMISSION CRITERIA: Open to all LACPA members and all non-member psychologists, psychotherapists, psychoanalysts, clinical and research psychology professors/instructors, and psychotherapy graduate students, nationally and internationally. Mirrors of the Mind welcomes ONE SUBMISSION ONLY of any visual art medium: painting, drawing, photography, textiles, jewelry, sculpture, ceramics, woodwork, furniture, and other 3-D pieces. Visual art videos are also welcome.

FEE: To defray event costs, there is a $35 fee for professionals and a $25 fee for students.

ISAPZURICH: I've been graciously accepted to be a Graduate Analyst 'Participant' at ISAPZURICH. So I plan to continue teaching there, now more often. And I'm very much looking forward to working together with the community of analysts and students to support the exciting and inspiring programs there. ISAP website, My Page

NEW WORKSHOP SERIES: This year I started up a new series of workshops/seminars for the lay public: "CG Jung Intensives"

Short intensive learning of Jung basics -- what is an archetype, a complex, how do symbols actually activate our imagination, etc. -- illustrating how they work in everyday life. Each workshop is based on a theme that illustrates the concepts.

The first workshop in May was “Fairy Tale Giants: how do COMPLEXes work” and BTW where does all that bigger-than-life affect come from? In the next workshop, we’ll look at the ‘wisdom’ in Snow White and Rose Red about how to invoke our healthy ‘animal instincts’ to create strong healthy boundaries in our relationships. Naturally M-L von Franz is a major source!

Reviews:

Early days! But most of those who attended want to join the next one.

I’ve been giving seminars/workshops with all of this material for several years now, to a very dedicated audience of psychologists/ professionals here in Holland. Now I’m reaching out to the wider public. I LOVE doing these, and it’s also a natural result of the lack of a training program here in the Netherlands.

A remarkable interdisciplinary conference took place on-line during the pandemic:
“Narratives in Times of Radical Transformation” from 19 to 20 November 2020.

“Jointly organized by the Technical University Berlin (Chair for Labour Science, Technology & Participation (TUB, ARTE), the Institute for Advanced Sustainability Studies (IASS), the Jungian International Association for Analytical Psychology (IAAP) and the Kokoro Research Center at Kyoto University, recently renamed in Institute for the Future of Human Society (Kokoro). All four institutions share a common interest in the reflection of narratives for personal, social and cultural transformation, but from quite different perspectives.”

In my presentation:

“A study of spontaneous narrative formation: coronavirus and narratives of doom”
I look at archetypal negative cultural movements / narratives and suggest we can apply Jung’s transcendent function to resolve, at least at the level of the individual, the psychological war of extreme opposites that arise when humans are afraid.

Psychedelics and Individuation:
Conversations with Jungian Analysts

A Joint IAAP and Pacifica Graduate Institute
Winter Conference | Hosted on campus at Pacifica
Graduate Institute,
801 Ladera Lane, Santa Barbara, CA
December 15th – 17th, 2023

From Renée Cunningham: Psychedelics are rapidly becoming an adjunct to psychotherapy, and yet, there is little research and writing being conducted on the shadow side of the use of these powerful substances.

Safety and containment are paramount, as well as an understanding of psyche. Psychoanalysts can play a powerful and critical role in the treatment of patients utilizing these substances. Please attend the attached conference for protocols on the use of psychedelics being conducted through Pacifica Graduate Institute.

Christina Becker adds the following regarding this conference:

Following the soon to be published Psychedelics and Individuation: Essays by Jungian Analysts, the editors Leslie Stein and Lionel Corbett have organized a conference in December on this important subject to Jungian practice.

Psychedelics are increasingly being proposed for the treatment of a variety of psychological pathologies. However, guidelines for their use are not yet settled and their place in psychotherapy and psychoanalysis is unclear. This conference will bring together Jungian Analysts and scholars from around the world to engage in conversations on the possibilities, potential and cautionary considerations regarding the use of psychedelics in Jungian Psychoanalysis.

From Thomas Elsner, Co-Editor-in-Chief and Managing Editor, Psychological Perspectives, a quarterly journal of Jungian thought:

Psychological Perspectives Vol. 66 #1

""Jung's conjecture about synchronicity is an attempt to address this exact problem. Synchronicity is an acausal connecting principle between psyche and matter. It implies that meaning is not merely subjective, not merely projected out onto a meaningless cosmos, not merely a poetic compensation for the dismal reality of objective fact; meaning is really there, out there, in the truth of things, or, more specifically, in the meaningful coincidence of inner and outer."

On the Threshold of Transformation: Liminality and Symbolic Death

Thomas Elsner, JD, MA

DESCRIPTION

The death of one thing is the birth of another. Liminal states of symbolic death and rebirth are central to the transformation of consciousness. We will explore liminality as it appears in ancient and medieval alchemy, Romantic poetry, Jungian psychology, within our dreams, and our personal experience of life.

In the late 1950's, at the height of the Cold War, Jung wrote that "we are threatened with universal genocide if we cannot work out the way of salvation by a symbolic death." What can individuals hope to contribute to the problem of war, the possible elimination of the human in the face of cyber-physical systems, the disintegration of religious meaning, political chaos, and other crises that confront all of us in the contemporary world? Liminal imagery of symbolic death applies to contemporary collective issues, particularly the creative evolution of Western solar/patriarchal consciousness (the religions of the Book, the European Enlightenment) via a return of the repressed lunar/matriarchal consciousness of the past. Applications will be offered for discussion.

Thomas Elsner, JD, MA, is a certified Jungian analyst practicing in Santa Barbara, California, and a graduate of the Jung–Von Franz Center for Depth Psychology in Zurich. A core faculty member and highly respected lecturer at Pacifica Graduate Institute for many years where he taught courses on depth psychology and alchemy, he has lectured and led workshops nationally and internationally. A recipient of the distinguished annual Fay Lecture series in analytical psychology, his book on Samuel Taylor Coleridge's epic poem, The Rime of the Ancient Mariner, should be published by the end of 2023.

CIVILIZATION IN TRANSITION 8

PSYCHE & EARTH
A Relationship in Crisis

November 2-5, 2023

Hotel Santa Fe, Santa Fe, New Mexico

We are painfully aware that we are destroying our shared and only home. Although the Covid-19 pandemic exposed both the dangers and fragility of our unsustainable way of life, we are returning to “business as usual”, unable to put aside factional interests when confronted with a global crisis. The resurgence of autocracy, nationalism, conflict, and polarization driven by social media, are driven by, yet exacerbate and distract us from, these failings in a toxic cycle that we have to break if we are to survive. Scientists have called the current geological epoch, which began when human impact on Earth’s land, oceans, atmosphere, and ecosystems became significant, the Anthropocene. Even though we have had an inkling of the problem since the late 1800’s, consciousness is slow to dawn and behavior even slower to change. Evolution has predisposed us to respond more readily to local events, such as storms, fires, and floods, rather than to global trends, such as climate disruption and the sixth mass extinction.

We have gathered provocative and diverse experts from Western, Eastern and Native American cultures and will encompass the fields of climate science, analytical psychology, ecopsychology, cultural ecology, deep ecology, environmental science, metaphysics and philosophy. Together we will explore the interconnection of all things, the personal and collective response to the climate crisis, the meaning of the pandemic, and the call to change that it has highlighted.

This conference provides an inter-active and proactive wake-up call to engagement, which begins from the moment you register with a minimal contribution to help us make this a carbon neutral conference. We aim to leave no carbon footprint from this conference, and each participant and presenter will play an active and important part in doing so. We hope you will join us for what promises to be a significant, stimulating, and provocative weekend.

IN MEMORIAM

From Laura Chapman, and courtesy the Jung Education Center of Cleveland:

Dr. Melanie Ann Higgins was welcomed into the IRSJA at our Fall 2022 meeting in St. Louis. With deep regret, we announce her passing in June.

Melanie Ann Higgins

1949-2023

Dr. Melanie Higgins, Ph.D., was born and educated in Cleveland, Ohio. Her doctoral dissertation involved researching the psychological after-effects of incest in women who were sexually abused as children. She received her post-graduate diploma from The Gestalt Institute of Cleveland with a specialization in working with families and couples. In 1988 a teaching position in psychology at the University of Maryland, European Division brought her to Germany. She taught there and then devoted herself to private clinical practice in Heidelberg and Frankfurt, Germany with adult individuals and couples for twenty-seven years. She received her diploma from the C.G. Jung Institute in Zurich, Switzerland, in 2004. She has lectured and has given workshops on "Forgiveness and Individuation" in the United States, Canada, the U.K and at the Jung Institute in Switzerland.

Whatever you do, if you do it sincerely, will eventually become the bridge to your wholeness, a good ship that carries you through the darkness of your second birth, which seems to be death to the outside.

- C.G. Jung, Letters, Vol. 1, 358-59

In Celebration of Ruth Ammann's Life:

Ruth Ammann

1934-2023

As most of you probably know, on August 3rd, 2023, Ruth Ammann passed away. Ruth was not only an inspiration and teacher to many, but also a dear friend and colleague. Ruth accomplished so much in her 89 years, from her work as a Jungian analyst, to her former presidency of the International Society for Sandplay Therapy, to being the curator of The Picture Archive of the C.G. Jung Institute in Küsnacht (see HERE). According to her obituary on IAAP's website (read HERE), a memorial ceremony for Ruth will be held at the CG Jung Institute of Zurich.

Honoring Ruth Ammann and the Picture Archive, C. G. Jung Institute, Zurich-Küsnacht

*Submitted by Martha Blake, MBA, NCPsyA
Psychologist #1824, Jungian Analyst
Director of Training, IRSJA
Dipl. Analytical Psychology, Zurich*

It was the Winter Semester of 2000 when I decided with my analyst Connie Steiner that I was ready to take the first half of the Propaedeuticum Exams at the C.G. Jung Institute, Zurich-Küsnacht. I attended only one of the two annual semesters at the Institute because I was still working in the United States. By 2000, I had completed three semesters and had 150 hours of analysis. When my Review Committee asked me how I had garnered 150 hours of analysis by attending only half-time, I replied that I telephoned from Oregon to Zurich for an hour of analysis each week. The Review Committee was aghast! Analysis by telephone? No one had ever heard of such a thing! Needless to say, I was not allowed to take exams until I had earned the required number of hours in the temenos of Connie's office.

I grieved. I was naive. Then I was angry. My analyst had not protected me. I had spent thousands of dollars on analysis and international long-distance phone calls with the best intentions. Then Connie cleverly redirected my energy. Connie knew I had first majored in art. Connie knew that the Student Room at the Jung Institute was on the top floor next to the Picture Archive. Connie tasked me to furnish the Student Room and choose images from Jung's clients stored in the Picture Archive to decorate the walls.

So my friend Christina Becker and I shopped in second-hand furniture stores looking for gently-used sofas, chairs, and a table within our student budget. After the furniture was delivered, it was time to find images of Jung's clients to decorate the walls. I made an appointment to meet Dr. Vincent L. De Moura, the Curator of the Picture Archive from 1998-2015. When he was in his little peaked-roof office, I was welcome to carefully view slides of the art of Jung's clients. There, I also met Ruth Ammann, the next Curator of the Picture Archive.

Today, I celebrate the wise redirection of my first analyst Connie Steiner, many pleasurable hours viewing images of Jung's clients in Vincent De Moura's presence, studying with Ruth Ammann, decorating the Student Room, and the 2023 book about the Picture Archive, one of Ruth's last contributions to culture before she died:

Ammann, Kast, Riedel (Eds.). (2023). Treasures from the Archive: C.G. Jung Institute Zurich-Kusnacht. Analytical Psychology Press.

The mandalas are two of the three I chose to directorate the walls of the Student Room. I cannot find the third one online.

The image of the book is Ruth's last contribution.

EC Corner

A Communication to the Membership from our President, Puddi Lareau:

Hello All,

Thanks to Eve Maram who is enlivening IRSJA communications with these Newsletters.

Hoping you and yours are all well as we head into fall.

Our 50th year! Amazing for an organization that was not necessarily meant to have longevity. Some of the founders and early members dubbed it “a floating craps game”. We’ll do some considering of how the game is going while we’re in Pittsburgh. We’ll have a forum where all of us can ponder where we’ve been, where we are, and where we’re headed. Shadow and Light.

Contributing to the sometimes-unseen functioning of the IRSJA, many standing committees have been meeting over the summer. You will hear and see some of what they’ve been doing elsewhere in this Newsletter. As well, your EC has been meeting monthly. We the EC are mostly continuing the work of our predecessors. We are sorting out and planning to have more ways to streamline processes by putting more online. For example, record and store our documentation online, find a way to have applications and training transcripts and other documentation able to be submitted and kept confidential online, keep the website current and informative. As I am writing this, Jan Stannard is working on the final draft of our Photo Directory.

I am excited and looking forward to being together again with you in Pittsburgh in October. The Pittsburgh seminar is helping with some of the plans. We’ll have a panel to showcase our life-blood, our various seminars. We will be electing a new Ethics and Ethics Appeals Committee, such significant positions. Of course, we will be having Review Committee meetings and several presentations from our members. Also, it’s fall, and we have the Memorial in the fall. AND Open Mic is back! Besides which Saturday night looks to be like so much fun – our first turn at dancing to the music of our very own DJ.

Here we are, staying the course, plying the waters:

“Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose.”

Warmly,
Puddi Lareau

Nominations Highlights

- This Fall we will be voting in the new Ethics and Ethics Appeals Committees. There will not be nominations from the floor in October. The current nominees are:
