

IRSJA Spring Meeting

Boulder, CO

April 29 – May 3, 2025

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS

We invite presentations that contribute to the theoretical, philosophical, experiential, ethical and/or clinical knowledge of analytical psychology. Presentations may include perspectives from diverse fields such as psychology, the arts, politics, religion, business, history and science.

In putting together our slate of conference presentations we take into account and try to balance many factors, such as: having a variety of presenters from various groups, a broad range of topics, looking for new faces to present as well as including those who have presented before, recognizing presentations of unique and/or original perspectives.

To build a more welcoming atmosphere for all and to actively educate ourselves, please be conscious in bringing material reflecting diversity, equity, and inclusion.

We invite proposals from both Analysts and Candidates, with the following formats:

- 35 to-40-minute paper followed by a 15-minute discussion
- Joint presentation by two individuals on a related topic, 15 to 20-minutes per presenter, followed by a 20-minute discussion.

Preference will be given to proposals that include image, through use of PowerPoint, video, film, arts, poetry, or music.

Proposals will be reviewed by the conference committee. Following the acceptance of your proposal, a complete application for continuing education credit is due by March 5, 2025.
